
COSMOPOLITAN HOTEL HISTORY

Goldsmiths Street began to emerge in the late 14th century west of the gardens, which were originally the Bishop's Court. From the 15th century was already used the name Zlatnická, because the goldsmiths began to settle in the street.

The entire Petrska quarter was affected by the construction of the Old Town and New Town walls. Peter Square was the center of the northern part of the New Town (founded in 1348), it is one of the oldest sites of Prague.

The hotel building was built during 1889-1890 by the famous architect Karel Janda for the Burgher brotherhood of the Prague tapster as their federal house.

Originally it has been a beautiful Neo Renaissance palace house, which consisted of two buildings connected with a stair wing. The facade, the walls on the ground floor and around the front door were decorated with valuable stucco decoration. Above the portal was preserved a pair of statues, where a boy symbolizes the abundance and a girl with the anchor the hope.

Since 1920 the building was the seat of the Association of Hoteliers and restaurateurs of Czechoslovakia, founded for the protection of interests of this professional group and for the edification of the hotel industry in Czechoslovakia. The Association published magazine Hotelier and other professional publications.

After the 2nd World War, the Association of Hoteliers was cancelled and there was founded an Economic group innkeepers trades, spas and sporting activities, the Central Union of Transport and other institutions. After the nationalization of hotels and restaurants, the building became the property of Prague.

Quality building with elegant interiors was left without repairs since the nationalization until 2015. All its parts were gradually completely devastated.

Complete reconstruction began in 2015. In just one year was built a new section with hotel rooms and with the help of sculptors and painters we managed to completely restore the historically valuable frescoes and stucco decorations in the restaurant.
